

This year's Nigeria Software Exhibition (NISE 2002) has come and gone but its memories will continue to linger on for a long time to come. The 3-day event was graced by the Federal Minister of Science and Technology, Prof. Turner Isoun and other senior members of the Obasanjo administration who have responsibility for determining Nigeria's IT direction. Notable among them were: Dr. Taju Oyawoye, Adviser to the President on IT and Prof. G.O. Ajayi, DG National Information Technology Development Agency (NITDA).

Practitioners and developers used the opportunity to request for government patronage of locally developed packages that have done reasonably well in the Nigerian environment. Representatives of government on their part assured participants and guests of government's determination to see the sector achieve its full potential.

About 33 exhibitors took part of which 13 were exhibiting for the first time. The exhibition featured both local and foreign developed products.

At the event, SystemSpecs displayed its two new generation products for preview: SunSystems 5 and HumanManager version 4. SunSystems 5 new features include form designer, customer management, supplies & pricing management and bill of materials, etc. While HumanManager has an additional module called Self-service.

SystemSpecs was adjudged by the Computer Association of Nigeria COAN, organiser's of the Exhibition, as the company with the Best Decorated Exhibitor's

Report

Developers Seek Government patronage

Booth and the Most Consistent Exhibitor. The later award was won by SystemSpecs last year.

Award, Well-Deserved. Comfort and Deremi display the plaques while Fela (l) and Kayode lend their support.

Training Talk. Obaro ponders as Abiodun Toki of Tom Associates explains.

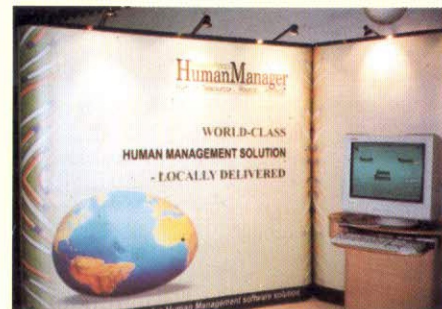

Ready to Deliver Value Anytime. Obaro welcomes the Minister of Science and Technology to SystemSpecs stand while COAN President, Ladi Ogunneye, and others look on.

Crack Team. (l-r) Moses, Deremi, Akunna, Fela, Comfort, Peter, Panebi and Kayode at the exhibition ground.

Business Talk. Duke (r) and Joseph take a visitor through HumanManager.

Here comes the Best Decorated Exhibition Booth