

Nigeria Software Exhibition - NISE 2000

There was a showcasing of a wide array of software at the Nigeria Software Exhibition (NISE 2000). On display were leading Nigeria developed software with great export potentials and other foreign developed software that were in use in the Nigerian market.

Welcoming exhibitors and visitors to the exhibition, Ladi Ogunneye, COAN President, said "... NISE 2000 (is) to provide the platform for the co-operation and interaction between international software experts and our local computer experts -- to provide the platform for Nigeria software experts to meet and explore the possibilities of collaboration and healthy competition"

SystemSpecs had a fine outing judging with the outstanding stand, quality of products displayed, calibre of audience from both government and private parastatals and the reception of the company's products. It was an avenue to introduce SunSystems e-business edition and SystemSpecs version 3.0 to the business environment in the country. Our colourfully dressed exhibition team were on hand to introduce visitors to the powerful functionality of these products

Other participants at the fair gave good account of the country's brilliant computer

Listening to a visitor's enquiry at SystemSpecs' stand experts.

This year's event stood to open up the country's borders to locally developed software, emphasising the fact that Nigerian IT experts are not afraid of competition and that their products can serve as a good foreign exchange earner.

The future looks bright for the IT industry if events like this are encouraged. It will help in driving up the quality of locally produced software and also provide a good foray for developers and end-users to meet.